

Guide to Digital Copies of Ohio County Histories

by Robert Foster Seal, M.L.S.

Published county histories are an invaluable resource for the family historian. They help to place our ancestors within the historical, social, and economic contexts of the place and time in which they lived and provide perspective and insight into their daily lives and activities. In addition to their genealogical information, county histories are often the best, and sometime the only, source for the history of towns and townships within a particular county. They contain portraits, photographs, sketches, and maps of the people, institutions, and places within the county, all of which help family historians to gain a more complete understanding and appreciation of the lives and times of their ancestors.

The purpose of this guide to digital copies of Ohio county histories is to provide the family historian immediate and convenient access to these published resources which were once only available in libraries and historical societies or on microfilm. The guide identifies digital copies of Ohio county histories accessible at FamilySearch, Google Books, HathiTrust Digital Library, and Internet Archive. These four sites provide digital copies of the original books as they were originally formatted and published, free of charge to all researchers. These sites were selected because collectively they provide the greatest coverage to the universe of published Ohio county histories, they are free, and they are user-friendly and generally intuitive in their use.

The term “county history” is being used broadly here to include standard county histories and collective biographies as well as county directories and county atlases when they include historical/biographical information (although digitized atlases are somewhat rare on the Internet because of their oversized format). The digitized titles included here generally represent the “golden age” of county history publishing in the United States: the last quarter of the nineteenth century and the first quarter of the twentieth century, roughly the period between 1875 and 1925. The publishing of Ohio county histories was inspired by three events during this time period: the United States’ centennial celebration in 1876, the start of the twentieth century, and Ohio’s centennial celebration in 1903. Many titles in the guide include the word “centennial” or the phrase “twentieth century” as evidence of the influence of these events. Most of the titles listed here have an imprint date of 1922 or earlier (with a few exceptions) because of American copyright law: books published in the United States before 1923 are generally in the public domain and may be digitized; books published in 1923 or later are generally still protected by copyright and may not be digitized and made publicly available without the copyright owner’s permission.

This guide is representative of the digitized Ohio county histories available on the Internet at this time and should not be considered comprehensive or exhaustive. Digital content is added to these four sites and other Internet sites on a regular basis and the researcher is encouraged to check the Internet on an ongoing basis for newly digitized titles. The guide essentially includes histories at the county level only. Histories of Ohio regions as well as histories of Ohio cities, towns, and townships are generally not included unless they represent the only digitized source for a particular county. Again, the researcher is encouraged to check these and other sites on the Internet for Ohio regional and city, town, and township histories of particular interest. There is at least one entry for each of Ohio’s 88 counties, and frequently more, although the digitized title does not always represent an entire work devoted to a single county; the county history may be included in a section, chapters, or even a single chapter in a larger digitized work.

The guide is a complement to the Ohio county histories available to Ohio Genealogical Society members at Heritage Pursuit under the “Databases” link at the OGS website. This is another excellent source for Ohio county histories which includes some local histories published in 1923 or later, titles which are generally not available on the Internet because of copyright restrictions.

This guide is arranged alphabetically by county and for counties with multiple titles, the titles are arranged chronologically by imprint date. Each entry includes the title, author(s) or editor(s) (if readily ascertainable), the imprint date, and the website(s) where the digital copy may be found. The four websites are: FamilySearch (FS); Google Books (GB); HathiTrust Digital Library (HT); and Internet Archive (IA). The sites are easy to use, have advanced search options, and can be searched by author, title, subject, or keyword(s). The researcher is encouraged to read the search tips (if available) at each site because search functions vary from site to site.
